

Career playgrounds not paths – lessons in growth, rejection and resilience

Sarah Carney
National Chief Technology Officer,
Microsoft Australia and New Zealand

Navigating a career
playground
versus career
path

There is never a perfect time
or perfect
plan

Skills, passions and superpowers

just six things...

Sit with discomfort
but set a deadline

If you can be one thing, be curious

Don't be fooled by "reality"

The background is a vibrant, abstract illustration of a playground. It features several distinct zones: a large blue area with a grid pattern and numbers (1-9) in the top right; a green area with a white grid pattern on the right; a yellow area with a white grid pattern in the bottom right; a purple area in the center; a blue circular area in the middle; a yellow area with a blue and green border on the left; and a blue area with a white grid pattern in the bottom left. The word "playground" is written in a bold, pink, sans-serif font across the center of the image.

playground

plan

DESIGN

RESEARCH

A

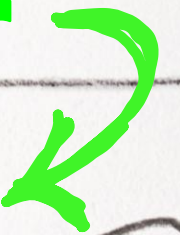

B

skill

passion

super power

HERO ID: ALEX CHEN

TITLE:
INNOVATION LEAD

SUPERPOWER:
STRATEGIC CURIOSITY
SKILL
SYSTEMS
THINKING

RESILIENCE:
HIGH IMPACT: IMPACT RATING:
95/100

Igniting Tomorrow's Solutions

FF

FUTURE FORGE CORP.

A simple wooden chair with a slatted back and a flat seat is positioned on the left side of the frame. The room has walls covered in vertical wood paneling and a dark, textured floor. The lighting is warm, creating a soft glow on the wall behind the chair.

discomfort

“success depends less on raw talent and
more on how we view
our ability to grow.”

Carol Dweck

be curious

reality
bites

